

Dilemma: Being Seen by Detection Tool

Situation:

The pandemic has shown us that sometimes it's necessary to take exams at home. Your educational institution has found a supplier with a tool against fraud and can check whether a student is actually taking the test at home. This ensures the educational process can still go ahead.

The supplier claims it can detect students in all their variety in appearances. This claim by the supplier has not been tested or researched by the educational institution itself.

Decision:

Your educational institution trusts the vendor's specifications and claims, purchases the tool and starts working with it. Do you agree or disagree?
